

Judith Fleischaker, DVM, MS

Practice Limited to Emergency & Critical Care

Judi Fleischaker, DVM, MS received her DVM degree from Colorado State University in 1985. Prior to her acceptance at CSU, Dr. Fleischaker worked as a veterinary technician in an emergency center for 8 years. She has co-authored journal articles on the topic of renal disease in Doberman Pinschers. She is a provider of emergency veterinary education to search and rescue groups, firemen, and policemen around the country.

Prior to her current position at Oakland Veterinary Emergency Critical Care, Dr. Fleischaker worked in emergency medicine in southeastern Michigan for the past 15 years and has spent the past 20 years working exclusively in emergency and critical care medicine. Her special interests include theriogenology and avian and exotic animal medicine. She is an active member of the Veterinary Emergency and Critical Care Society.

Dr. Fleischaker is a member of the American Association of Feline Medicine, American Association of Avian Veterinarians, Southeast Michigan Veterinary Medical Association, and American Veterinary Medical Association. She is also on the Disaster Medicine Task Force.

Medical Staff Member